A Fit Place for Economy.

The need of the nation for rigid governmental economy in order that the heavy burden laid upon the taxpayers by war-time expenditures be not increased is vital today. Retrenchment and economy are policies that must not be deferred.

Compulsory military training, in order that the nation may never street. again stand at the threshold of a world war so unprepared as it was in 1917, is another essential to prudent government. But it is emphatically a policy the enforcement of which may safely be deferred Suppose its table stakes. Funny to a more favorable time.

Today the nation possesses an army of trained veterans in civil life. For at least four years to come it will have among its citizenry he never shot craps. What do at least 2,000,000 men of military age more thoroughly trained in poets know about jack-pots? Everythe school of the soldier than they could ever be under any system body's talking to ghosts. For these reasons Congress will act wisely if it acts in accordance with the views of those who urge that legislation for uni- spade and always can expect a versal military training be allowed to go over until the National Treasury is better able to meet the cost.

It is estimated by the Republican leaders in the House that an Pop corn balls $2 a dozen. Wah adequate system of compulsory training would cost $700,000,000 a I'd taken up black-jacking as a year. The cost of a regular army of the smallest proportions that trade. So much more refined than have yet been suggested would bring the total military expense of profiteering. the government up to $1,175,000,000-or more than our annual national expenditure for all purposes prior to our entrance upon the cape tenements. This is no time for expenditures of that character and extent, when the method and propriety of retrenchment are so plainly indicated.

On the basis of estimates now before Congress, the National Treasury faces a deficit exceeding $3,000,000,000.

How could such a deficit be met? By a new loan? Financier insist that such a loan could not be floated at less than 6 per cent. A loan of that nature would not only impose a burdensome interest charge upon taxpayers for decades to come, but would immediately depress the prices of outstanding government securities.

The nation has no right to forget its moral obligations to the nearly 22,000,000 citizens who came forward with their savings to for long. Nearly all the well dressed buy liberty bonds in the days of national need. It has no right to repudiate the assertions and the promises of its agents in the press the change. Without the short vamp and on the four-minute platform, who promised that the bonds the feet look like they might be repudiate the assertions and the promises of its agents in the press the would be good security for the money advanced. Already they are depressed, in some instances, as much as 10 per cent. It is forecasted that a 6 per cent bond issue now would send them down 25 per cent, at least.

Mr. Frank Vanderlip has said with some bitterness that the mayors as there are races, government's treatment of these bonds has turned the 22,000,000 new investors, who had been taught to save and invest their money, graphically rather than ethnologiinto an equal number of incredulous and disappointed citizens who will never risk their funds again. His opinion is unquestionably an extreme and extravagant one. But it is true that the depreciation the idea of creating an unofficial of liberty bonds, resulting from no fault of the government, has been Lynch was writing on space; that Simmons' case with Capt. The deliberate adoption now of a policy which printed. He covered the Essex would greatly extend that depreciation would be fatal.

A deficit that must not be met by borrowing can only be met by his chance to build copy around increased taxation. But the burden of taxation on our people is frequenters of the courtroom.

of our national safety, in the event that the peaceful purpose of the league of nations shall be thwarted. But it is not necessary at this moment. It cannot possibly be vital to our safety for four years to come, or the period at which our present trained veterans will begin to pass the limits of military age. Perhaps by that time the world may have discovered the long sought remedy for all wars.

Of course the straw votes of the big colleges on the Presidential question are all very interesting, but the one that the candidates have the deepest interest in is the Electoral College.

What Speaker Sweet and his colleagues of the judiciary committee, in the New York legislature, seem to be trying to prove is that the Socialist literature was widely Red.

The Rockville (Md.) girl who went right in and got the license, because her swain was too bashful, has no misgivings over who will make the fire these cold mornings.

Count von Reventlow lauds Gen. Pershing's report, and hopes it will be circulated in Germany. Is the count having his little joke, or don't they know yet who won the war?

More than $1,000,000 in new buildings in the District for January will do more to relieve the shortage in housing facilities than even the Rent Commission.

Henry Ford is now ready to launch his gasoline driven street car, and offers to race it against a railroad train. Wonder if it can beat a 7-cent fare?

A scientist is offering $5,000 for evidence of communication with the spirit world. Argument seems to have reached the "put up or shut up" stage. The wet folks assert that Representative Barbour's complaint is not the first evidence that there were water bugs around the Capitol.

The governor of Kentucky has created fifty-six new colonels. Much easier, no doubt, than creating the juleps to go with them.

One of the things that the railroads are not so anxious to have returned are the problems Mr. Hines is struggling with just now.

Congress evidently feels that the District should be satisfied with the privilege of taking a straw vote.

We may expect the government to release that $2,500,000 whisky ship in the sweet rye and rye. Scanning the stock market news, one is struck by the oppor
